Michael Miller
PROFESSOR OF HISTORY

*Of Time and the River:
The Marne in French History*

The history of rivers has been the subject of increased attention in recent decades, mostly as a tale of engineering and environmental change or as river biography in the guise of national history. In this talk, Michael Miller takes a different approach, asking how Marne history, and property disputes over “who owns the river,” catch unexpected understandings of French connections to their past, and how the built river landscape reveals the complementarity between modernity and tradition in modern France.
